Train Baltimore User Guide

What is Train Baltimore?
Train Baltimore is a user-friendly website with a searchable database of free and low-cost training opportunities. It helps residents compare training programs and answer basic questions about program eligibility, cost, enrollment, and outcomes. In addition to the searchable database of training, other sections of the website connect residents to:

- GED programs and English classes
- Information on college degree programs
- Job placement and job readiness services
- Career exploration resources
- Other community services focused on financial stability, legal services, and more

Why Was Train Baltimore Created?
Train Baltimore was developed by the Job Opportunities Task Force, a Maryland nonprofit that develops and advocates policies and programs to increase the skills, job opportunities, and incomes of low-skill, low-income workers and job seekers. Train Baltimore was developed with feedback from local workforce providers, job seekers, government agencies, and other stakeholders, and through the support of the Surdna Foundation.

Train Baltimore is intended to connect Baltimore workers with a limited educational background and limited vocational skills to basic hard-skill training. In today’s economy, workers with limited education and a lack of marketable vocational skills are increasingly squeezed out of jobs – particularly stable, good-paying jobs. Often residents don’t know where to turn to get effective help building the skills they need to advance, and find themselves in a frustrating search. Train Baltimore helps close this information gap, and includes all the information residents need to make an informed choice about training.
Navigating the Site

The Homepage
You can navigate to all of the site’s content directly from the homepage. There are two main features of the site: the searchable training database, accessible through the blue box in the center of the homepage, and additional resources, accessible through the orange boxes. You can also use the Training, Resources, and About links at the top of the page to navigate the site.

The Training Database
Once you navigate to the training search page, you’ve reached the core of the website. Here you can search through a database of nearly 150 different occupational training programs, using a variety of criteria to search and sort.

What is Included? The database includes information on hard-skill occupational training programs in Baltimore City and Baltimore County. Job readiness and soft-skill training... programs are NOT included in the searchable database. For example, programs that train candidates for specific jobs (construction apprentice, nursing assistant, food service worker) are included. Programs that provide general coaching, resume prep, and interpersonal skills are NOT included unless they also have an occupational component – these programs can instead be found on the resource listing pages.

The database includes programs offered by nonprofits, private career schools, government agencies, and community colleges – though for-credit degree programs are NOT included. The database is restricted to free and low-cost programs. This includes any program with a cost of $5,000 or less, and intensive programs (900+ clock hours) with a cost of up to $10,000. All information is self-reported by the training provider. If a program does not appear, it means that they have not provided us with program information.

Conducting a Search. When you arrive at the training search page, all of the listings will appear, sorted by cost from low to high. To narrow things down, there are two ways to start your search. First, you can click on one of the check boxes and the site will automatically narrow down the program list. Second, you can enter a keyword, program name, or organization name into the open-ended field and hit “search.”

Using the check boxes, your primary search option is by industry. You can select as many industries as you like. You can also narrow down your search to programs designed for specific populations, including youth or people with criminal records. Other search options let you find evening/weekend programs, programs open to those without a high-school diploma or GED, and Workforce Investment Act (WIA) approved programs. When you un-check a box, your results will no longer be filtered using that criteria. To start a completely new search and clear all filters, hit the orange button that says “Reset.”

You may also wish to sort your search results. They are automatically sorted by cost, from low to high. You can also choose to sort by provider name or by industry.

Reviewing Program Details. The results at the bottom of the search page will give you basic information about each program that meets your search criteria. This includes the program name, a brief description, the industry, provider, phone number, and cost.

Geriatric Nursing Assistant

Description: Women are trained to be nursing assistants and certified by the MD Board of Nursing

Industry: Healthcare & Biosciences

Provider: Caroline Center

Phone: 410-563-1303 x13

Cost: $50.00 + Must pay $209 for certification and $25 for uniform
